

Floor Board

Abstract

The present invention relates to a floor board which can be attached to various types of rigid frame used in vehicles, structures or equipment. To minimize the formation 5 and accumulation of debris, the floor board of the present invention includes a fixedly positioned supporting plate which is also connected to a flexible body having protuberances which extend away from the supporting plate in such a way as to deform under a loading force.

10